

A call for entries for community organizations, architects, artists, design professionals and students who are interested in developing a socially conscious, sustainable, community oriented project in Chicago.

SERGIO PALLERONI

Affecting lasting change through design build activism

LECTURE & WORKSHOP

Wednesday, October 21 2009, 6:00 p

Sergio Palleroni is an architect, professor, and fellow at the Center for Sustainable Practices and Processes at Portland State University and is internationally known for his social and environmental activism, and for providing sustainable design solutions to communities in need. Palleroni is also co-founder of BASIC Initiative, a service learning program for students in various partner universities.

We are pleased to announce a workshop between Mr. Palleroni and selected architects, artists and community organizations in Chicago engaged in activist design or design/build projects. The discussion will consider how to solicit community input, obtain funding and university support, represent the culture of the people and communities they are working with, and create social and community sustainability.

Parties interested in participating in the above discussion should submit a one page summary with the following information:

- (a) Mission/Interest
- (b) Description and status of the project
- (c) 3 questions for discussion
- (d) Brief bio of the attendees- each organization may bring a maximum of 3 members to the event

Responses should be sent to rvsp@shedchicago.com no later than October 7, 2009. All selected participants will be notified within 1 week by phone and/or email.
